Peter and the Wolf – Sergei Prokofiev

1 Early one morning, while his grandfather was still dreaming of an angel and a bear and a runaway bull, Peter tiptoed from their cottage out into the garden and past the fat duck, who blinked sleepily at him. Peter quietly opened the gate and skipped out onto the wide green meadow.

A little bird was perched on a branch of a big tree near the garden wall. He was Peter's friend. "Good morning, Peter," chirped the bird gaily. "What a fine day!"

2 When the duck saw that Peter had not closed the gate, she roused herself and began waddling out of the garden and into the meadow. "How nice to start the day with a swim in my very own pond," she thought.

3 The little bird and the duck were friends, but sometimes they liked to tease each other. Today the bird flew down onto the grass and said to the duck, "What kind of bird are you if you can't fly?"

The duck quacked back, "What kind of bird are you if you can't swim?" And she splashed noisily into the pond.

The two argued back and forth, the duck splashing and swimming in the pond, the bird fluttering and hopping along the pond's edge.

"You can't fly!" twittered the bird.

"You can't swim!" quacked the duck.

4 Suddenly Peter, who was watching the duck and the bird argue, saw a cat sneaking through the tall grass.

"Oh, how I love little birds," thought the cat. "And this one is so busy arguing, I'll just grab him and start my day with a lovely breakfast."

"Look out!" shouted Peter. The bird instantly flew off to the big tree the garden wall while the duck quacked angrily at the cat from the middle of the pond.
